WHEN you start your shipments between the southeast and the northwest or between the southwest and the northeast, how will they move thru Frisco-land, the great central heart of America? . . . Speedily and dependably if you route them via Frisco Lines. Here is one of America's great railroad systems—nearly 6,000 miles of rails—more than 25,000 teleworkers—a connecting link with an enviable reputation for fast schedules, splendid equipment, and efficient, courteous service.
