“NOW IS THE TIME.”

The time has come and it is right here now, when something must be done, and it is up to the railroad employes as a body and their friends to put their foot down and say the persecution of railroads must stop, and stop now.

Did you ever stop to think that railroad men, with what influence they have with their friends, could almost, if not completely, control who should go to the legislature or congress from certain districts.

Then why should we not get busy and say to the eager candidates what he or they should do for the different companies by whom we are employed, for when they or we do anything that helps the railroads, we are helping every single person employed by said railroads and we, as employes, are only doing what is right for the ones that give us our bread and butter, when we insist that the railroads must have help and persecution stopped.

Stop and think about this matter. It is a serious predicament, but, nevertheless, that is just what must be done and done now. Look at the men out of employment today who would, no doubt, be working if it were not just a case of cut down expenses or quit business.

The men, by talking this matter over in their different lodge rooms to start with, and then going before the public in general, could help the railroad companies by which they are employed, wonderfully.

Then again, they would be in a position to say to their different representatives to both legislature and congress, if you expect our
