S. A. BIGGS,
The various lines of the Frisco System run through many different parts of the west, south and southwest, and traverse some of the finest agricultural, timber, fruit growing and mining sections of this country. Owing to the nearness to raw products of almost all kinds, factories and mills can be successfully operated. In addition to this, the "Great Southwest," with its rapidly growing population and few factories in proportion to population, offers an unrivalled market for all finished product.

Possibly you intend visiting the

this summer, and if you come to St. Louis and wish information regarding the advantages of the southwest as a location for your business house, mill or factory, we would be pleased to have you call.

If you cannot call in person, then give full particulars in writing, and we will cheerfully furnish information regarding best available openings and what inducements, such as free sites, bonuses, subscriptions to stock, etc., are offered. Send for a copy of handbook entitled, "Opportunities," giving description of all towns and cities along the Frisco System, and full information relative to openings of all kinds for factories and mills.
